Dori Grinenko Baker is a consultant with the Fund for Theological Education and their Calling Congregations and Vocation CARE programs, which support young people as they seek out their call in the world. She is also the author of Greenhouses of Hope, Doing Girlfriend Theology, and Lives to Offer.

Almost like Chicken Soup for the Soul for an adult reader.

The Barefoot Way is a book I had to use in class. I don't I can say enough good things about it. This is a book you can read, early morning over coffee or tea, sitting alone in your nice comfy chair. Or right before you go to bed. It pulls at your heart strings. If you are looking for a daily devotional, this is the book to get.

Story-telling becomes an art when there is movement from narrating details to illuminating the personal, psychological, and spiritual aspects of the story-teller. Dori Baker has a gift for coaxing and inspiring the artist in all of us. The Barefoot Way moved me in the best sense: it tugged at my heartstrings, made me laugh, cry, and think - and then it literally moved me out the door and into the world, so that I might listen more attentively to the sacred stories around me. In Baker's skillful hands, art does not imitate life - the art of story inspires faithful living.
