I guess I didn't realize what they were for. I was looking for the ones like old days.. You spray or sponge white for stencils on windows.. during holidays. These were not sturdy or coated enough to use a lot... They fall apart. The old kind-- yes back in 60's--- were almost a "Kindura" or better coated tag-paper even like a Wax paper type then....and help up for years... Also didn't read the print on how SMALL they really are.. My Fault. Positive: they are good as they are for tracing lines and coloring etc.. for kids..

I am onto my second book of these stencils as the first fell apart after sponge painting on brown paper to make our own Christmas wrap last year. The effect was fantastic and my 5 year old was able to have great success. We sponge printed and then added some detail with glitter pens. The paper did get soggy and fell apart after 3-4 quite big sessions of being pretty much drowned in paint so I wouldn't call this a criticism given the price. Everyone had a "wow" response when receiving their gift wrapped in hand painted paper with raffia. The only problem we had was that the picture went quite close to the edge so there was some overspill of paint. We were able to get multiple colours on the figure though. To give you an idea of the size, the book is A5 (2 would fit side by side on A4) and there is one picture per page. We pulled the book apart and the pages were a decent thickness of cardboard. We also gave these as gifts to children and they were a very big hit. You would obviously get a lot more use if just using a pencil to create pictures for colouring

A lot smaller than I was expecting them to be but that was my fault for not reading the info. They still worked for my craft project to all is good!

This is a nice assortment of 3-4" Christmas stencils. We used them to make T-shirts, and used each a couple of times. They held up to a seven year old blobbing on paint, and two adults also using them. I wiped off the paint each time one was used, and it was good to go for another round. I was able to keep the entire set for future use, so I'm very pleased for an item that cost just over a buck.

I love making my own Christmas cards for everyone and I needed some more Christmas-ie stencils so I found these and got them.

I am looking forward to using these next Christmas. I use them to decorate my Christmas packages, and the family really loved the way they look Great Christmas stencils for cards and other winter scapes for kids to do. Use with acrylics for best effect..

i used this for pictures on the window and they fell apart before i was even done i know it was for paper
