Customer Reviews

Aspiring artists will find plenty of inspiration from the new Art Ed Books and Kits series by Janet Boris: Frida Kahlo; Roy Lichtenstein; Robert Rauschenberg; and Jacob Lawrence. Each oversized cardboard box kit includes a 24-page artist biography, an eight-page activity book (linked to the artist's work), and materials in the medium used by the profiled artist. For example, included in Frida Kahlo's kit are: 5 tubes of non-toxic paint, 5 oil pastels, 10 sheets of art paper, 3 paint brushes, a mixing palette, a diary booklet and a frame. Janet Boris is a writer and film director who began her career in children's educational television. Walter Hopps is the curator of 20th-century art at the Menil Collection, Houston, Texas. Deborah Schwartz is an art educator and consultant who was vice-director of education at the Brooklyn Museum, New York.

Surprisingly upbeat and fun use of the work of an artist whose difficult life is too often dwelt upon.

Nice book series. My daughter read it cover to cover and lead to more reading of different artists.
For this I give it 3.

We homeschool and I found this kit to be a wonderful tool for teaching art at home to our pre-teen and teen children. It has all the essential tools, information and supplies all for one really great price in a box! At pre-teen and teen ages they need some more substantial learning in art and this has it all!! I am very impressed with the items, price and value! Two thumbs way up!
