Customer Reviews

Borch, a cartographic publishing company from Germany, makes tough, long-lasting maps with non-toxic, environmentally responsible lamination material.

Just back from Venice and I agree with the rest of the reviewers here that this map is absolutely reliable. It's very detailed, easy to follow and got us through the maze of tiny streets and canals without any problems. The only time we actually got lost was when we started to feel too confident and walked on a hunch. A quick look at the map got us back on the straight path.

The map itself is very complete! Great informational source, but you'd better bring a magnifying glass with you for this map. It was impossible to read on the street - much too small print. I used it extensively in the hotel at night to plan the next day's walking plans, but was not able to use it at all while walking.

Durably constructed, easy to read, indexed listing of all streets (including over a dozen named Calle d. Forno, "Oven Street") with key tourist sights and hotels indicated. A life-saver for a potentially very confusing set of streets, canals, and boat routes.

A very helpful map for plotting out a tour plan. It lets me know all the sites and how far from where I will be staying. I can mark my interests and group them by location, in planning each day.

There are better maps to be had once you get to Venice. I left this map at our lodging without using it once. Not useful at all.

Borch Maps in my opinion are the best out there as they have the popular spots marked on the map and are laminated so that you can mark them up yourself and then wipe them clean when you are done. Love them.

I use this brand of Maps for every trip to Europe. Never fail I can find my way around. Just a warning even with the best map venice is tricky to navigate
