Detective Nate gets his first international case when a friend loses somethingAhe doesn't know whatAwhile visiting Sweden. Ages 6-9. (May) Copyright 1999 Reed Business Information, Inc.

Grade 1-3?In the latest addition about this popular detective, Nate solves his first international case without ever leaving his neighborhood. He receives a cryptic postcard from his friend Rosamond. She writes that she has lost something during her Scandinavian vacation and that if Nate refuses to find it she will pester the King of Sweden for help. The lost item is tiny, lives in dark places, and has a long nose. Nate and his trusty dog, Sludge, begin visiting Rosamond's friends in search of clues. A picture examined under a magnifying glass leads him to believe that the lost item is a troll. He goes to the library for information on trolls and then back to his house for his trademark brain food?pancakes. Deductive reasoning, combined with astute observations of Sludge's burial of a bone, finally saves the day. Although Simont's appealing watercolor illustrations provide visual clues, this case is significantly more difficult than others in this series. This particular volume is for avid fans rather than novices. Initiates may need more familiarity with the personalities of these distinctive characters to grasp some of the wry humor. Advise children to begin with earlier "Nate the Great" books and return to this one for full enjoyment.?Jackie Hechtkopf, Talent House School, Fairfax, Copyright 1997 Reed Business Information, Inc. --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.

Jake the Great is a wonderful series for providing pleasure lessons for 6 -8 year old kids via inductive and deductive reasoning. Be sure to shop carefully in the Good Used Section for the "Activities Included" statement at the bottom of the cover. My 7-year old grandson looks forward to the several craft ideas as much as he does each new story.

I bought four of these books in hopes that I could interest some of my struggling boy readers in the 3rd grade. I have a waiting list for each of them. My 2nd and 3rd grade boys and girls have enjoyed the books. I am planning on buying the rest of the books in this series this fall. My boys are already asking if they can go on a waiting list for them.

These books are long enough to stop at a chapter for the next night. 4 yr old loves rto be read to at night before bed

I've not read this Nate the Great book myself but my almost 5 year old nephew has really enjoyed all of them.

I am a title I reading teacher and I was looking for some books to recommend to my second graders. I bought some of the Nate the Great series books to look at. This book was the first one that I read and I found it to be very enjoyable. I know the children will enjoy it also, especially the characters, Nate and Rosamond. Boys and girls who are ages 5-8 will relate to Nate and Rosamond and the adventures they go through. If you are looking for fun, short chapter books for your first-third graders, I think they will really enjoy these.

My son loves these books!
