Health Promotion In Multicultural Populations: A Handbook For Practitioners And Students (Volume 3)

Synopsis

Edited by Robert M. Huff, Michael V. Kline, and Darleen V. Peterson, the Third Edition of Health Promotion in Multicultural Populations offers both students and practitioners an indispensable resource on assessment and implementation guidelines for promoting health and enhancing behaviors that optimize health in any cultural community. Leading experts explore a wide range of topics, including the context of culture, cross-cultural perceptions of health, conceptual approaches to multicultural health promotion, health disparities, and the contributions of multicultural populations. Using the Cultural Assessment Framework (CAF), this proven handbook includes a focus on six specific populations (Hispanic/Latino, African American, American Indian and Alaska Native, Asian American, Pacific Islanders, and Arab Americans). The text concludes with a set of tips for working cross-culturally and a discussion about where the field is heading with respect to research and practice in the 21st century.

The book has good points but a lot of common sense too. I had to buy this for a class.

Great textbook!

it was not a great book for the class at national university.

This is the most horrible book I have ever had to buy so far in college. All this book does is blame white people for everything that is wrong in the world today.

Public health's most current frontier is in trying to replicate its great successes in mainstream population in the global and domestic minority and ethnic enclaves. All lives and all populations matter, and this text book squarely addresses the breadth, challenges, and potential for expanding human opportunity, health, and life outcomes in all communities and populations. Important for academics as well as practitioners. This is a text book that will make a mark in the real world, not just within the halls of ivory towers.
