Population And Community Health Nursing (6th Edition)

Synopsis

The community/population health/public health nurse is charged with promoting the health of populations, not only the individuals within populations. This requires advocacy on the part of the nurse, for entire communities as well as for the individuals within. The long-awaited sixth edition of Population-based & Community Health Nursing by respected leader and educator Mary Jo Clark has been thoroughly updated with an even stronger population-based nursing approach.

Population-based & Community Health Nursing, 6e continues to approach population-based/community health nursing from an aggregate perspective, clearly showing how nurses can serve to improve the health of populations within a community by functioning as advocates on many levels. To illustrate how that can be manifested, real-life vignettes begin every chapter, showing students what advocacy looks like in the public health context. In each chapter, clinical reasoning exercises are woven throughout in boxed features.

Mary Jo Clark, PhD, RN, PHN, has been practicing and teaching population health nursing for 50 years. After completing her BSN degree at the University of San Francisco, she received her introduction to global population health nursing as a U.S. Peace Corps Volunteer in Vita, India, a rural town with a population of about 3,000. Returning to the United States, Dr. Clark employed her cross-cultural expertise as a Public Health Nurse in the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. In 1973, she became a pediatric nurse practitioner, and later began teaching population health nursing at East Tennessee State University. She completed a master's degree as a community health clinical nurse specialist at Texas Women's University and a PhD in nursing at the University of Texas at Austin. Moving with her army nurse husband to Augusta, Georgia, she taught graduate and undergraduate population health at the Medical College of Georgia. For the past 29 years, Dr. Clark has taught at baccalaureate, master's, and doctoral levels at the University of San Diego, Hahn School of Nursing and Health Science. In addition to her full-time teaching and writing, Dr. Clark has maintained an active population health nursing practice. She is well known in the population health nursing field and has provided consultation and made presentations across the country and overseas. Her many and varied experiences in population health nursing in the United States and abroad form the core of the material presented in this book.

I appreciated all of the new factoids that I found out from reading this book. However, the reason I couldn't give this text a 5 star rating was that it quoted from Wikipedia, which is such a no-no in the Academic World. Otherwise, great text.

When advancing your degree or working within the health department of community this book helps you to understand the population that is in your community and how you can best serve it to improve health outcomes.

This was for a second part of a Community class. It just did not give me the great information I liked from the previous book. Some of the chapters were repetitive making it a difficult resource to use for writing papers. The case studies were great though.

This book is awful. It's huge and unorganized. Only got it for school. Waste of money. But then again aren't most of these textbooks??it only had a star because doesn't accept without a star rating

Boring text book

Had what I was looking for... Great for nursing students

The book was well written and very interesting.

I love my book very clean and clear!!
