Inn-to-Inn Walking Guide: Virginia And West Virginia

Synopsis

If you thought hiking from one bed-and-breakfast to another was something only New Englanders do, you are in for a pleasant surprise. The Inn-to-Inn Walking Guide: Virginia & West Virginia offers readers 20 of the best country rambles found in the Old Dominion and Mountain State. Typical hikes wind through America's cultural landscape, past living history sites and museums, as well as remote mountaintops and forests. Walk along the towpath of a former canal, meander along the level grades of a converted railroad bed, and hike through serene holdings of an elegant resort. Each chapter provides at-a-glance information to a hike's length, difficulty, scenery, lodging information, and more, while detailed trail descriptions get you from one inn to another with confidence and style. Detailed profiles of suggested inns are also included, as well as local dining possibilities. Don't let the idea of carrying a heavy pack and sleeping on the cold ground keep you from a pleasant walk in the woods. With this book as your guide, you can hike on some of the most pleasant, pack-free rambles these two states have to offer. Trails include: Appalachian Trail, Allegheny Trail, C & O Canal Towpath, Chessie Trail, Greenbrier River Trail, Huckleberry Trail, New River Trail, North Bend Trail, and Virginia Creeper Trail.

Su Clauson-Wicker has made a living as a writer and editor for over 10 years in the Blacksburg Virginia area. In addition to editing the Virginia Tech and Radford University magazines, she has worked as a newspaper writer for the Roanoke Times & World News as well as edited Voices of Women, a series of essays on the U.N World Conference on Women in Beijing. When she isn't writing, she acts as an interpreter at historic Smithfield Plantation in Blacksburg. Inn-to-Inn is her first book.

I know what a terrific writer and traveler Su is, plus a very nice person. I was delighted to find the picture of my Inn on the cover of this Wonderful little book. Some of the nicest guests we have ever had were hikers who found us on the Bicentennial Trail (Route 76). Again, congratulations Su. I know how hard you worked. Barbara Bell-Capozzi (Innkeeper at EVERGREEN)
